FAULTLESS FAMILY MEDICINE

"I have used Simmons Liver

Regulator for many years, hav-

a great preventive of sickness.

I often recommend it to my so."

STOCK NOTES.

It is estimated that the value of the wool produced this year is seventy millions of dollars from 30,000,000 sheep.

The famous horse "Claiborne," which carried General Grant in many a battle, has been presented to the Kansas Soldiers' home.

T. L. Bacon of Prescott, lately shipped 600 beef steers to Southern California. Mr. Bacon's range is near the Willows. He has a great many head of cattle and is a thorough stockman.—Courier Prescott.

Walter L. Vail is gathering a thousand or two steers for delivery to California parties. More beef cattle have already been sold in Southern Arizona this Fall than during the past two years together.—Tucson Star.

J. Q. Adamson, of the Tragic meat market in Prescott, recently shipped 1,000 head of fat sheep from his Holbrook range to Los Angeles, where he and his partner, Mr. Stephens, have recently opened a meat market.

At the Norfolk and Norwich Fat Stock Show the champion over all was a 30-months roan Short horn steer. He weighed 2,287 pounds, and was winner of a second prize at the same show last year and had gained 2 pound per day since.

Robert Bonner, of New York, since 1850, has invested the large sum of $416,326, in trotting horses. Two of them Pocahontas and Maud S, cost 40,000 each. He has at present in his stables no less than sixty trotting horses.

The new stock yards at St. Joseph, Mo., which cost $350,000 have been opened for business. The cattle pens will hold 340 car loads of stock and the horse and mule department has stalls for 250 horses and 400 mules.

At a combination sale of draft horses by Ramsey & Co., of Jacksonville, Ill., last Thursday, five Percheron stallions averaged $842, and one Percheron mare brought $525. Four Clydesdale stallions ranged $652.50, and grades brought $150 to $245 each.

Messrs. M. W. Stewart, W. H. McKittrick and Wm. Whelan went to Hermosillo, Sonora, last week, to try and sell a large number of bulls which have been running on their ranches for several years, and which they are therefore anxious to dispose of. Mr. McKittrick returned here Wednesday and states that they will probably make sale of their bulls.—Wilcox Stockman.

Fifty years ago the average weight of beef cattle was 850 pounds, now it is 1400 pounds. The increase is due to introduction of pure bred stock and the more careful breeding, as well as the much better feeding of the produce. It is now as common to have animals 1800 pounds as it was to have them 1200 pounds, and the increase in weight is fully one-third. The improvement in far Western stock is still greater and nearly double in weight since the large introduction of Polled Angus, Hereford and Short-horn blood into the herds.

The Chiricahua Cattle Company shipped another train-load of beefs to San Diego on Sunday last. The shipment comprised 466 head, of which number 132 grown cattle and 50 calves (or veal) came from the company's own range; 147 head were purchased from Mayer & Schae, 120 head from T. C. Williams, and 17 head from Wm. Biken. The cattle were all in splendid condition to make first-class beef. The steers in the shipment of the Chiricahua Company's own raising were an unusually fat, smooth lot.—Wilcox Stockman.

The past ten days have been tough ones for Texas cattlemen holding herds for shipment. Almost every herd in the vicinity stampeded, and consequently this week the railroad had cars and no cattle to ship. Jos. Lang had 260 head to get away, and has not yet got them together. Thos. Trammell lost a large herd north of here. C. C. Slaughter's cattle, held near Big Springs, stampeded and he will probably not be able to gather them this winter. Pierce and Peavey, driving 2,000 to Colorado for shipment, lost 1,100 of the herd. There are orders for more than 500 cars but at present no cattle in for shipment.—Stock Grower Las Vegas.

Amos Brittlekin, who is one of the oldest residents of the village of Florence and a deacon of the church, was until yesterday the owner of a very remarkable cow. Yesterday brought the animal to town and sold her to the butcher. Although a beautiful creature of pure Jersey blood and only 4 years old she had ceased to be of any value either as a breeder or milk producer. Until about a year ago, according to Mr. Brittlekin's statement, she was distinguished for the superiority of her offsprings and the abundance and rich quality of her milk. One hot day, however in August, 1886, she became overheated in being driven from the pasture, which was about a mile away from the farmhouse. As soon as she cooled off she was taken to the barnyard well, where horses and cattle were watered from a large tub. This was full when she began drinking, but it was only a short time until she had emptied it and was eagerly lapping the bottom with her tongue. Brittlekin Jr., a lad about 12 years old, thoughtlessly pumped the tub half full, and again permitted the animal to drink. When she had again reached bottom he became alarmed, and led her away. The little creature had swelled out under the enormous pressure of the liquid until she much resembled in shape the jumping frog of Calaveras county after it was filled up with shot. Then young Brittlekin sat down to milk her; but the liquid which he obtained as a result of his labor was no longer of that rich yellow color which had formerly distinguished it. It had suddenly degenerated into the palest of pale blue, but made up in quantity what it lacked in quality, for before the weary youth finally left his milking stool he had filled no less than four buckets with this liquid, all of which was given to the pigs.

The next milking resulted similarly, and so with each succeeding one, until the cow was reluctantly delivered over to the butcher's knife. Although apparently retaining her health in every other way, she only drank about once in seven days. When she did, she emptied the tub, once, and often, in hot weather, twice. After slaking her thirst her stomach would distend to twice its natural size and would remain so for a period of twelve hours, when it would gradually resume its normal proportions. As she had failed as a milker she was given a chance to distinguish herself as a breeder.

Strangely as it may seem all her offspring, while they were in every respect fine healthy calves inherited the camel like capacity of their mother for enormous quantities of water, and would sometimes remain a whole week at a time without drinking a drop. When they, in turn, began to give milk, it presented the same appearance of having gone through the hands of several city firemen. When the mother was killed to-day, it was found that her four stomachs had united into one, which had spread itself so that it overlapped most of her other internal organs. Why her calves should have inherited this deformity is one of the many mysterious questions connected with the subject of animal reproduction.—Omaha Ex.

SINGULAR CALVES.

"You have been very ill, haven't you, George?" she murmured softly.

"I am so glad to see you again."

"And I am enraptured at gazing on your face once more," he replied.

"I came very near leaving you for ever. Did you know what was the matter with me?"

"No George not exactly. I heard it was brain fever, but I didn't believe it."—Merchant Traveler.

Miss Softly (from the city on a visit)—What a charming cow! Why I should love to caress her. May I Mr. Hayseed? Farmer Hayseed—May you what mum? Miss Softly—Caress the cow. Hayseed (who is a cautious man)—Well, you may mum, but unless you've got an accident insurance policy with a wild bull clause in it you'd better not.—Philadelphia Call.

"WITH BUBBLING GROAN!"

A Fatal Sense of Security Awfully Realized.

"A wet sheet and a flowing sea, a breeze that fell low and fast."

From his look-out the faithful old captain of yonder merchantman casts an uneasy glance at the distant horizon. See! yonder a small speck of cloud "no larger than a man's hand." He watches it with his piercing eye for a few moments, then reaches for his long eyeglass.

To his experienced view, this harmless little cloud betokens danger.

Across his bronzed face there comes a look of determination, and with quick orders to the steward, the craft is put about and all sail made for the nearest harbor, where in apparent safety the anchor is dropped, and the hardy mariners watch the approaching storm with defiance!

The storm bursts!

The decks have been cleared, the sails close furled, and all ordinary preparations made for a emergency.

The storm increases but all seems safe.

But see! the vessel gives a sudden lurch, turns quickly about, and away she goes!

The anchor chain has broken!

This mighty ship might have ridden safely, but for one weak link in that anchor chain!

The strength of the chain is no greater than the strength of its weakest link.

On the sea of life, how many men are wrecked because of the unsuspected weakness of a link in the chain of health,—one weak vital organ in the body!

The mystery of death is even greater than the mystery of life. We think the links of our chain are strong, but we too seldom critically examine them for ourselves, and never really know that they will bear the strain that we put upon them.

"I have a friend," said Dr. Rio Lewis, "who can lift 900 pounds, and yet is an habitual sufferer from kidney and liver trouble and low spirits." The doctor who was one of the wisest and safest public teachers of the laws of health, wrote:

"The very marked testimonials from college professors, respectable physicians, and other gentlemen of intelligence and character, to the value of Warner's safe cure, have greatly surprised me. Many of these gentlemen are of known and ready testimony. I was impelled to purchase some bottles of Warner's safe cure and analyze it. Besides I took some, swallowing three times the prescribed quantity. I am satisfied that the medicine is not injurious, and will frankly add that if I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble I should use this preparation."

One year ago the Sereia, while in a great storm, parted her two-inch rudder chain,—no wonder,—it was rusted through! The key to human health is the condition of the kidneys, and they may long be diseased and we be ignorant of the fact, because they give forth little or no pain. They in reality cause the majority of all the deaths, by polluting the blood and seeding disease all through the system.

The largest bones ever given in this country, in any one case, were executed and filed yesterday, by Judge W. C. Hazledine, solicitor of the Atlantic and Pacific railroad.

They were given on the appeal of the railroad tax case to the supreme court and aggregated $137,000. The sureties were Jefferson and Joshua Reynolds, the millionaire bankers and stock men of New Mexico, Texas and Colorado.—Journal Miner.
